FOREWORD

Periodicals in raised print for the blind or in Talking Book form represent an additional source of reading material for the blind, supplementary to the books and other printed or recorded matter provided by the Federal government through the Library of Congress. This new edition of the compilation Periodicals of Special Interest to the Blind is a guide to this additional reading matter. It also lists inkprint publications dealing with work with the blind or furnishing information on specific groups, schools or associations within the field. Twenty-five of these are published in the United States and three in Canada.

There are three braille periodicals published in Canada, and there are ninety-four in the United States. Of the latter thirty are devoted to specific subject matters or furnish current news and professional discussions of interest to blind people or to those who work with the blind. Thirty-three are religious publications; seven are reprints of inkprint current events papers for the grades and high school; twenty-one are special organs for schools, alumni groups, and agencies for the blind; and three periodicals are specially devoted to the deaf-blind.

Blind readers who prefer New York Point have a choice of three magazines, and Moon readers may receive two periodicals in that type. There are four periodicals published as Talking Books at the present time.

The wide circulation of the periodicals published in this country for the blind and on work with the blind is an indication of their value to the blind and to the field. The American Foundation for the Blind presents this list as an aid in the selection of the type of publication wanted.
